behavioral health groundbreaking

Investing resources in the behavioral health crisis facing our children by building a new space to house all acute care services, while also expanding outpatient therapy and imbedding support staff in schools and daycares.

connected

Led by teams from neurosurgery and craniofacial surgery, Dayton Children's Hospital successfully separated craniopagus conjoined twins. The hospital chronicled the boys' journey through an hour-long documentary called 'connected.'

community benefit and support

Dayton Children's is the fourth largest employer in the region and pumps hundreds of millions of dollars into the community in wages. Our success means that we can also be a key contributor to efforts that help reinvent the path to health care and support kids outside the hospital walls. In return, our community has always been generous in helping Dayton Children's go from good to great.
